

Kathy is a Principal at Liberty Venture Partners, a venture capital firm located in Philadelphia specializing in medical technology and IT companies.

Prior to Liberty, Kathy was Founder, President, and CEO of Animas Corporation (NASDAQ:PUMP), a leading manufacturer of insulin infusion pumps located in West Chester, PA, from its inception to its acquisition by Johnson and Johnson (NYSE:JNJ) in February 2006. Prior to Animas, Kathy was Founder, President and CEO of Luxar Corporation, a leading manufacturer of CO₂ lasers for cosmetic and oral surgery applications located in Seattle, WA. Luxar was sold to ESC Medical (NASDAQ:ESCMF) in 1996. Prior to Luxar, Kathy was Co-founder, President, and CEO of Laakmann Electro-Optics, Inc. ("Laakmann"), a leading manufacturer of CO₂ lasers for medical, scientific, and industrial applications located in San Juan Capistrano, CA. Laakmann was sold to Johnson and Johnson (NYSE:JNJ) in 1981. Kathy continued to run Laakmann for five years post-acquisition.

Kathy received her BS from University of Pennsylvania and her PhD from University of Southern California.

Kathy is a director of Adhezion BioMedical and Xanitos, Inc, both Pennsylvania companies.